G. done his Pulitzer prize play, "Hell Bent from Heaven," he had been marked as a playwright of the southern mountains, and producers wanted him to do the same sort of thing again. Other playwrights, he pointed out, having once created one popular play were unable for a number of years to produce something of a different character, lighter in tone or less significant.

His talk was predicated on his observation of the rise and fall of Broadway's "miracle men." Professor Hughes pointed out a number of examples of individuals who had made a mark as playwrights, as producers, as managers, as actors, and as scenic designers, who, when they left the field and put their that great pressure to produce something great, the majority of these, he had observed, faded from the scene and accomplishing little or nothing else of note. Under the technicality, those present expected to postpone until the next meeting the proposal that women be admitted to membership in the association.

A short discussion was had on this suggested change in the constitution, and it will come up at a meeting to be held in February.

Notice was taken of the death of Richard Moldenke, '83 Mines, '87PhD, long a member of the association.

John D. Hainey, '10PhD, vice-president of the association, reported on plans for a memorial for the late Professor Charles A. Downer, '01PhD, former president of the association. This memorial will take the form of a gift of books or of money to City College, where Professor Downer taught for many years, the fund to be raised by subscription of the members.

Those present at the meeting, held at the Men's Faculty Club, included:

Michael Levine, '12PhD; George W. Oda, '12PhD; G. Jennings, '19PhD; Fred L. Hine Jr., '07AM; A. E. Waterhouse, '13AM; R. M. Palman, '26AM; L. G. Lynn, '13AM; Herbert R. Moody, '01PhD; Ewing S. "Untouchables" Represented
By Ambedkar, '15AM, '28PhD

The social fight in India to break the ancient barriers of the caste system is being led by Bhim Rao Ramji Ambedkar, '15AM, '28PhD. At the Indian Round-Table Conference in London, Dr. Ambedkar, an "untouchable," a man of the despised Mahat caste of scavengers, recently sat at the table with a Prince and Knight when His Highness the Maharajah Gaekwar of Baroda had as one of his two dinner guests, Dr. Ambedkar.

It is true that Dr. Ambedkar is not typical of his own caste and class, as the table set for three was more a sign of an isolated miracle than a symptom of any material change as yet in India's 5,000-year-old social system.

Dr. Ambedkar's special mission to the Round-Table Conference is to see that the future welfare of the 43,000,000 people of India's depressed classes is safeguarded by the terms of the new constitution which may emerge from the negotiations.

"The best friends I have had in my life," Dr. Ambedkar says, "were some of my classmates at Columbia and my greatest professors, John Dewey, James Shuttleworth, Edwin Sargent, and James Harvey Robinson." At Columbia, Dr. Ambedkar worked on economics, sociology, and political and moral philosophy.

Rumor of Going to Penn Is Unfounded, Says Little

Rumors continue to make the rounds that Lou Little is to transfer his football allegiance next year to the University of Pennsylvania, from which institution he was graduated in 1919, but in an interview with The Alumni News a few days ago, Little stated that the rumors were without foundation.

"Do you think you will go to Penn?" Little was asked.

"No, there is no reason whatsoever for any reports saying that I will go there," said Little as he headed for the gymnasium to team up with Ralph Furey in a handball match against Herb Kopf, end coach, and Paul Mooney, a member of the New York Giants professional football team.

A story in "The Evening Post" of Dec. 16 said that Little is being considered for the coaching position at Penn, this information coming from, as the writer of the article stated, "a prominent alumnus who is close to Penn athletic affairs."
